Building on a Legacy...

Your council is both sustaining our legacy and projecting it into the future.

OCF's historical niche among military ministries, our mandate as Christian officers, continues to be "Equipping for biblical leadership." The council has determined that our model for Christian officer leader development that has served the Fellowship well for many decades, predicated on equipping and encouragement within local small group fellowships and reinforcement through large group conference center experiences, requires being brought up to date and expanded in the 21st century. In 2014, we continued the effort from 2013's new strategy for development of Christian leaders in multiple dimensions—personal Christian maturity, Christ-like service, and leadership in the profession of arms, and fruitful service through OCF within the body of Christ—encompassing institutional training, self-development and experiential growth.

Now we will ensure we understand the needs and develop the tools to support our members in both their Christian walk and their professional growth, meeting them where they are in both, unbounded by physical limitations and ensuring we continue alongside our members in every stage of their professional and faith life.

Our conference center performance has never been greater and we are blessed to have those incredible resources integral to our wonderful ministry. We continue the work of recapitalizing our conference centers with attention now turned toward the expansion of Hartley Holmes Lodge at Spring Canyon to accommodate the increased guest capacity.

Financially, your Fellowship ended the year poised for success in 2015. OCF continues to hold both Charity Navigator and GuideStar highest ratings for sound fiscal management and commitment to accountability and transparency. Similarly, the Fellowship extended its record with another "clean" independent annual audit.

Thank you, for your service to Him, to our country, and to this Fellowship. I am honored to serve you as your President. May God bless and keep you in the very center of His grace.

OFFICERS' CHRISTIAN FELLOWSHIP

2014 ANNUAL REPORT

The body of OCF carries the hope of Jesus Christ into the military society through its members, programs, and small group fellowships.

Conference Centers: Spring Canyon in Buena Vista, CO, and White Sulphur Springs in Manns Choice, PA, served approximately 6,700 guests in 2014. These centers are two of OCF's primary training grounds for those who live, work and minister in the military society.

Academies & ROTC: OCF has staff couples located near each of the four military academies where they embolden the Cadets and Midshipmen to know what it is to be a Christ follower through biblical leader development, Bible study, discipleship, conferences, retreats and mission trips. While all open their homes for training, counsel, and hospitality, OCF owns properties near the U.S. Military Academy and U.S. Naval Academy allowing an extraordinary level of hospitality to Cadets, Midshipmen and their families. OCF currently hosts five ROTC regional retreat conferences each year with plans to expand into the Northwest.

Field Ministries: OCF has staff couples assigned to regional centers who interact with and give guidance to the volunteer lay leaders in the United States and in other countries, forge relationships with local churches, and provide support to the Chaplaincy. Staff couples help these leaders engage in their faith with those around them by establishing a variety of programs in the area from small group fellowships and training conferences, to making contacts within the area and supporting chaplains and pastors. In addition, OCF sponsors Spiritually Smart Family conferences to assist with service separations, conflict resolution, staying close while apart, parenting tips, re-integration following deployment and much more.

FROM THE EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

Brig Gen David B. Warner, USAF (Ret.)

I am encouraged!

2014 was an exciting year as we saw record attendance at our conference centers due to the increased capacity afforded by the generosity of so many faithful donors to the OCF Growing and Building Campaign. In addition, the number of reported "life-changing" experiences more than doubled, exploding from 206 in 2013 to 581 in 2014.

Against the backdrop of a fallen world and an increasingly secular culture, Officers' Christian Fellowship is thriving through the participation of young service members and brand new believers to seasoned retirees and life-long followers of Jesus; from battlefield Bible studies to lunchtime fellowships this blessed ministry continues to joyfully advance His Kingdom to God's Everlasting Glory.

The exercise of biblical leadership describes what Christian officers do. The integration of faith and profession is the sine qua non, the absolutely essential ingredient, in how they do it. We teach military leaders how to meld religious and professional aspects of their lives into one harmonious and integral whole to meet their military obligations in a manner consistent with their Christian value system. People determine what they think about God by what they see in his followers so it emboldens us to live out our faith in ways that honor him with our lifestyle, our words, our social awareness, our relationships, and the strength of our commitments.

Financially OCF ended 2014 in a strong position to head into 2015 ready to impact the military for Christ. Through generous ministry partners as well as the increased revenue at our conference centers, OCF is poised to have greater Kingdom impact on the military society well into the future!

Thank you for teaming with us in "Building Christian leaders, families, fellowships...for a lifetime."

OCF Purpose Statement
